German Toll Mounts Hourly; Timoshenko Fights New Thrust In Northeast

NEW YORK, June 23—Russian forces at Sevastopol have succeeded in closing a gap made by the Germans in the northern defenses of the Black Sea naval base, the British radio said today.

The BBC, quoting the Red army newspaper Red Star, was heard by CBS.

MOSCOW, June 23—Strong units of sea-borne Russian reinforcements were reported arriving in the Crimea today to aid in the defense of beleaguered Sevastopol.

The Soviet reinforcements were said by the newspaper Pravda to be landing from the sea in the face of intensified German pressure against the Black Sea naval base.

German Col. Gen. Fritz Von Mannstein, after failing to subdue Sevastopol on the anniversary of Germany's first year of war with Russia, poured in hundreds of dive-bombers in a new concerted attempt to smash the Soviet bastion.

Populace Evacuated
Pravda said part of Sevastopol's siege weary population, particularly, children were being evacuated.

The removal of children and other civilians from Sevastopol was seen as an added indication of Russian determination to hold the

As the Soviet reinforcements streamed ashore under protection of naval units luftwaffe dive-bombers concentrated their attacks on Sevastopol's coast defenses.

The toll of German casualties in the fierce battling around the Crimea fortress mounted hourly. Casualties were estimated at 100,000, with a probable 50,000 of these killed.

While the beleaguered defenders of Sevastopol were subjected to the constant merciless hammering of Nazi planes, tanks, artillery and infantry forces, Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's Ukrainian army tackled units under com-

JAPS EXTEND OPERATIONS EAST

Observers classed as harassing actions the shelling of the Oregon coast near Seaside and of Vancouver Island by Japanese submarines. The two points on the Canadian and American west coasts shelled by the Japs are shown on the inset map above. Advance of Jap forces 275 miles further eastward in the Aleutians to the island of Kiska is shown on the map above.

Hit-Run Japanese Craft Hunted Off West Coast

ASTORIA, Ore., June 23—United States planes and surface craft today pursued a relentless hunt for a marauding hit-run enemy vessel, believed to have been a Japanese submarine, which lobbed nine 5-inch shells onto the Oregon coast shortly before midnight Sunday.

Observers believed that the attack was staged as a "face-saving" maneuver to give Tokyo and Berlin radios something for local consumption and in an effort to draw the Japanese public's attention from heavy losses suffered by the Nipponese in the Coral Sea and Midway naval battles.

The attack produced some excitement among the civilian population, but none of the morale-shattering type an enemy would hope for. Throngs of curious

War Bulletins

CARACAS, Venezuela—A rescue squad sought today to recover the wreckage of an Army plane in which two American fliers crashed to their death yesterday in Lake Valencia. Lieut. P. P. Carter and Sgt. K. G. Anderson, instructors of a group of Venezuelan flying cadets, were victims of the crash which occurred when the plane failed to pull out of a power dive.

$42,829,003,067 FOR U.S. ARMY'S USE APPROVED

Biggest Measure In Nation's History Receives Stamp From House Committee

AIR CORPS TO GET MOST

Pay Increase, Women's Corps Send Measure Higher Than Earlier Estimates

WASHINGTON, June 23 — The House appropriations committee today approved a $42,829,003,067 Army bill — the biggest money measure in American history—to meet expenses of the nation's military establishment in the federal year starting July 1.

Largest single item in the measure is $11,316,898,000 for the Air Corps, embracing provision of 23,550 airplanes to complete the Army's share in President Roosevelt's objective of 185,000 planes for the calendar years 1942 and 1943.

The huge appropriation measure brings to a staggering total of more than $205,000,000,000 the amount appropriated, authorized or pending for National Defense and the war effort in the fiscal years 1941 to 1943 inclusive.

As sent to the committee, it called for $39,532,309,062. Later expansions, including enactment of the Army pay increase and allotment bills, caused the committee to add $3,296,634,005. Only $1,940,000 was trimmed from the bill.

Total Now $129,506,009,081

The giant bill brings the total of Army and Navy appropriations since Pearl Harbor to $129,506,009,081, the report pointed out. To date appropriations since December 7 totalled $60,782,314,300 for the Army and $25,903,691,714 for the Navy. Concerning its need, the committee reported:

"According to the deputy chief of staff, Lieut. Gen. J. T. McNamara, the War department regards our present situation as the most critical which this country ever has encountered."

The budget estimates, it added, provide for a war Army which was planned to begin the fiscal year at an enlisted strength of (Continued on Page Two)

FIVE QUESTIONS MAY BE VIEWED BY TWO CHIEFS

WASHINGTON, June 23 — Determined to bring the "maximum concentration of allied war power on the enemy" at the earliest possible moment, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill today were believed to be making fateful decisions concerning the offensive strategy to be employed against the axis this year.

Sitting together in the White House with their high ranking naval, military and air experts, the two leaders of the United Nations are, according to a joint statement issued by them, in "complete understanding and harmony" concerning the "vast and grave tasks which lie ahead."

Responsible diplomatic sources in Washington believe the decisions which the President and prime minister are making will be along the following lines.

1. To strengthen immediately the British position in Egypt in view of German General Erwin Rommel's swift advance through Libya.
2. To launch against Germany within the next few weeks the greatest Anglo-American air offensive the world has ever seen.
3. To speed up and increase Anglo-American aid to Soviet Russia.
4. To set a tentative date for the opening of a second land front in Europe later this year, providing circumstances are favorable.
5. To intensify American air and submarine attacks against Japanese forces in the Pacific.

FALL OF TOBRUK SHORTENS AXIS SUPPLY LINES

Supply of Marshal Erwin Rommel's Axis armies, which now have reached the Egyptian border, has been made easier by the capture of Tobruk. The Central Press map, above, shows how the German and Italian forces can obtain supplies now via the Axis-held island of Crete and the port at Tobruk. Formerly they were forced to bring them from Sicily to Tripoli, and thence across the desert to the battle lines.

AXIS COLUMNS NEARING EGYPT

British Field Guns Hit Transports Moving Toward Capuzzo

HALFAYA PASS, EGYPTIAN-LIBYAN FRONTIER, June 23 — Axis transport columns moving eastward from Libya toward the Egyptian border in the vicinity of Fort Capuzzo were hammered today by British field guns.

The British middle east command said in a communique that axis activity in the frontier area was "slight."

British mobile forces, it was added, were active south of Trigh and Capuzzo.

Fire of the British guns blasted against German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces as they moved into position along the frontier in apparent preparation for a large-scale attack which is expected within a few days.

The British Eighth Army under command of Lieut. Gen. Neil Methuen Ritchie made ready behind strong fortifications on a line running from Solum southward to Sidi Omar to ward off the axis blow.

Scattered small units of British troops, defying surrender, meanwhile continued to fight in isolated areas in the vicinity of fallen Tobruk. Observers reported that the desultory fire could be heard coming from sectors near the Mediterranean port.

The axis assault against Egypt is expected to be led by Rommel's 21st Panzer division and the Italian Ariete division, according to military observers, since these forces played only a small part in the capture of Tobruk which was carried out mainly by the 15th Panzer division supported by Italian and German infantry.

PINCERS BLOWS AT RUSSIA MAY BE TRIED SOON

WASHINGTON, June 23 — A joint German-Japanese pincers blow at Russia from Europe and Siberia this Summer was foreseen today by some military and naval experts as a distinct possibility on the basis of recent axis maneuvers in the Aleutian islands, Libya and around Sevastopol.

With American war production rising rapidly toward, and in some cases, past peak production, these analysts asserted that Germany, Italy and Japan are fully aware they must attempt to knock out Russia before snow flies again and before the United States and Great Britain can open their anticipated "second front."

Military and naval men believe that recent operations on various fronts have been curtain raisers for the main act of the Summer—a German push along the entire Russian front from Murmansk to the Crimea and a Nipponese aerial, land and sea assault on Soviet defenses in Siberia.

NO LOTTERY PLANNED FOR YOUTHS OF 18, 19

WASHINGTON, June 23—National Selective Service headquarters disclosed today that the 3,000,000 youths 18, 19 and 20 years old, who register for the draft next Tuesday will be given their order numbers on the basis of their birth dates, instead of by holding another national lottery.

Draft headquarters, in an official bulletin, pointed out that 20-year-olds who register on June 30 will be liable to military service, and that the younger registrants also will be liable to be called to the colors as they become 20.

LOSS OF 88 IN SEA DISCLOSED

U. S. Passenger-Freighter Hit; Army Men Among Casualties

AN EAST COAST PORT, June 23—Eighty-eight men, including some soldiers, were missing today, the Navy reported, in one of the most disastrous single sinkings since the beginning of U-boat raids within American waters.

Two torpedoes, dispatched in the space of two minutes, destroyed a medium-sized United States passenger-freighter about 75 miles off the coast. All lifeboats went down with the ship.

The vessel carried a crew of 112 men, 11 members of a gun complement, 41 soldiers and five other persons. Eighty-one have been accounted for.

Story of the attack was told by Third Mate Edwin R. Kremer of Philadelphia, a blonde, blue-eyed lad of twenty who doesn't yet shave more than once a week.

"I was on the bridge when the first torpedo suddenly hit us, about 11 o'clock on a pretty calm night. Immediately I gave the signal to the engine room for full speed ahead."

"Just then Captain Brown (Twigg E. Brown of Jacksonville, Fla.) came onto the bridge and he shouted for each man to save himself. The boat was listing about 75 degrees. I went below for some papers and the (Continued on Page Two)

CANNED GOODS BUYERS TAKE OFFICE IN CAPITAL

COLUMBUS, June 23—Field buyers for the canned vegetable unit of the Chicago quartermaster depot have established offices in the Columbus headquarters of the War Production Board.

They are purchasing canned foods from canners throughout Ohio for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and other federal agencies and are operating under a conservation order which requires canners to set aside a certain percentage of their pack for use of the armed forces.

RAF HITS NAVAL BASE AT EMDEN

Command Says Heavy Raid Carried Out Against Important Center

LONDON, June 23—Royal Air Force bombers raided the German port and naval base of Emden on the North Sea during the night, it was disclosed today.

The British bomber command said the heavy raid was carried out successfully. Six planes were reported missing.

The attack was the second against Emden in three nights, British craft having blasted the base in a Saturday night assault.

The Berlin radio broadcast a dispatch by the official German news agency DNB revealing that high explosives and incendiary bombs were dropped on northwest Germany.

The attack, DNB said, was chiefly directed against Emden. Usual Nazi assertions said the only casualties were to civilians and sole damage was to residential buildings.

BATAAN HEROES MAY BE GIVEN GOODS FROM U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23 — A campaign initiated by San Francisco newspapermen to have food, cigarettes and other comforts sent to American defenders of Bataan now held prisoner by the Japanese gained momentum today with the support of the State, War and Navy departments and the American Red Cross.

Sponsors of the campaign have asked A. L. Schafer, Red Cross Pacific coast area manager, about the possibilities of having a neutral nation act as an intermediary in seeing that the contributed supplies are sent to the American prisoners.

"The State department, the War and Navy departments and the Red Cross are negotiating with the Japanese government to permit American representatives to work with an International Red Cross emissary in Manila," Schafer said.

"Thus far, the Japanese have not complied."

The movement got off to a flying start last week with a $1,000 "ante" contributed by newspapermen attending a Press Club dinner addressed by an American officer who was one of the last to leave Bataan before it fell. Despite repeated statements that money is not now needed, more contributions have been coming in daily.

TEST MAY BE SOUGHT

Entire War Program Hit: Loss Of Seven Warships In Mediterranean Told

LONDON, June 23 — Bitterly critical over military reverses in Libya and of the high command's general war strategy throughout, the House of Commons was assured today that Prime Minister Winston Churchill would soon return to London to face his accusers in person.

Churchill, now deeply engrossed in conferences with President Roosevelt in Washington, has been informed that "his presence in this country is desired," Major Richard Clement Attlee, deputy prime minister, told the restless House.

Attlee answered the unspoken demand for Churchill's return by announcing briefly that information as to the desirability of his presence in London had been passed along to Washington.

Churchill's Fate Tested
Political observers believed it likely that a motion of non-confidence in Churchill's conduct of the war would be introduced prior to forth-coming debate on Libya. The government is expected to counter with a motion demanding confidence, compelling the House to vote on whether or not the Churchill government is to be retained in office.

One thing is certain: When Churchill does come back, with or without a plan drafted by himself and the President for defeat of the axis by early opening of a second front in Europe or by some other means, he will face the hardest fight of his career.

Parliament almost unanimously wants to prod and question him on these main points:

1—The almost incredible loss of Tobruk in the course of a 24-hour onslaught by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

2—Losses to British and other United Nations shipping by enemy air, surface and submarine action.

3—War production in general, with emphasis on the right kind of guns and airplanes, deficiencies in which are held to have been demonstrated in the latest Libyan campaign.

4—Military leadership, with stress on Churchill's unyielding determination to hang on to the Ministry of Defense despite almost constant charges that no one man can successfully shoulder all the burdens he has taken on himself.

Obviously unsatisfied with Attlee's explanation that General Sir Claude Auchinleck's troops in Libya were "exhausted" and could not turn the tide of battle at Tobruk or even with his assurance that "substantial" land and air reinforcements are arriving in North Africa, the House raked every angle of Churchill's war policy over the coals.

BOY, 'IMPULSE' ABDUCTOR, GIVEN 15-30 YEAR TERM

MARQUETTE, Mich., June 23—Ross Heath, 15-year-old "impulse" kidnaper, was under a 15 to 30 year sentence in the Marquette branch prison today in the abduction slaying of Gloria Jean Nault, 10-week-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Nault of New Swanzy, 20 miles from Marquette.

Sentence was imposed by Circuit Judge Frank Bell to whom Heath said he didn't know why he kidnapped the infant.

"It was just an impulse," asked the judge. The boy nodded his head.

Heath took the baby as she lay sleeping on the seat of a car parked in front of a tavern where she had been left by her parents. He said the baby was killed when he stumbled and fell on her body.

charged that British aircraft production is now only 100 percent greater than in the autumn of 1940 "when Lord Beaverbrook completely wrecked the whole production program."

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Lord Beaverbrook at that time was minister of production.)

Hopkinson said:

"Production was actually going down, owing to the machinations and follies of that curse to this country—Lord Beaverbrook."

The closest thing to an outright demand for Churchill's return was made by Earl Winterton, who asked for a full statement from the prime minister. Sir John Sydney Wardlaw-Milne then said he and other members of Parliament would put into motion a resolution admiring the conduct of British troops but disclaiming all confidence "in the military direction of the war."

Almost Grand Inquest

The sitting was virtually a "grand inquest" of Churchill's war policies. Its gamut ranged all the way from mere censure of authoritative interpretations and communications to one suggestion that the best available general in Josef Stalin's armies be detached from the Russian front to take command in Cairo or even come to the House of Commons to lecture Great Britain on the way to win battles.

Political observers had anticipated some pyrotechnics when the House assembled but the avalanche of criticism exceeded all expectations. It is not believed that any previous prime minister has been so bitterly assailed at a time when he was not on hand to answer the criticism in person.

Fall Heavy Blow

Attlee admitted that the fall of Tobruk was a "heavy and unexpected blow" but declared that although Britain's position is now difficult "the fight for Libya still continues."

He disclosed that Britain lost seven warships and other vessels in the recent axis battle against two convoys in the Mediterranean. These, he said, included one light cruiser, four destroyers and two escort vessels.

Axis losses included the torpedoing of one battleship and the sinking of one eight-inch gun cruiser, two destroyers and one submarine.

Speaking on Libya, Attlee quoted a message from Gen. Auchinleck stating that at one time the axis forces in Libya were exhausted and had literally fought themselves to a standstill.

"We might have turned the scale but we were equally exhausted and it was impossible," were the words of Gen. Auchinleck quoted by Attlee.

Gen. Auchinleck's message concluded that the British Eighth Army still was in the field and already had received and still was receiving reinforcements.

HUGE AMPHIBIAN TANKS READY FOR WAR DUTY

DETROIT, June 23 — Mammoth amphibian tanks, described as the "latest headache for Hitler," today are being turned over to the Navy department, it was announced today following naval acceptance ceremonies at a Graham-Paige plant.

Navy officials, who made the announcement, were reticent concerning details of the huge "sea tractor." They divulged only that the amphibians carry steel tractor treads and heavy armor plating, and are mighty enough to serve as a military freight car.

"This machine will bring a new phase of warfare," said Lieut. Frank H. Hittner, naval material inspector.

Last Moments of Japanese Aircraft Carrier

These pictures, just released by the Navy, were made from the air during the Coral Sea battle. They show the last moments of the Ryukaku, one of the enemy's newest and best aircraft carriers. She went down in flames after receiving fifteen bomb and ten torpedo hits. Column of smoke indicates one of the hits has just been made (1). Outlines of the ship and her plane deck can be made out beneath billowing smoke (2). Smoke soars into the sky as if the ship's ghost is about to depart (3). Part of the superstructure of the Ryukaku is visible in this view. A few minutes after it was taken, she began to settle (4).

2,800,000 men and increase during the year to over 4,500,000 men.

For personnel, which includes pay, subsistence, clothing, medical care and welfare, the bill appropriates $10,739,559,342; ordnance, $9,948,319,237; transportation, including equipment, $3,721,692,958; signal corps, $2,617,506,025; construction and maintenance of establishments, $2,445,945,000; chemical warfare $620,546,241; engineer corps, $874,132,192; miscellaneous including administrative expenses, $229,967,951; miscellaneous supplies, equipment, services, $158,403,730; seacoast defenses, $97,249,641; training and education, $44,987,840, and civil components $3,684,000.

Of the total, $12,700,000,000 is for lend-lease operations—"financing the supply of defense articles, including information and services to the United Nations," the committee reported.

The bill provides $28,334,464 for the newly created Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, which now contemplates a peak force of 25,000 women during the coming fiscal year.

The committee saw a promise of "large economies flowing from voluntary refunds by contractors and from the renegotiation of contracts."

Potential savings already approximate $1,137,000,000, which the committee said "reflects the zeal of the War Department to maintain profits at fair levels, and reflects the high type of men running the plants upon which we are so largely dependent for the production of munitions."

The report found that the raw material situation generally is satisfactory but held the rubber phase "rather disturbing." It emphasized the importance of motorists using their cars only for most essential purposes "if the boys at the front are to carry on."

ANOTHER HITLER FOLLOWER ENDS LIFE WITH GAS

NEW YORK, June 23—For the second time within a week, a German-American Bund member has committed suicide when under subpoena by the federal grand jury in their investigation of that outlaw organization.

United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa disclosed that George Schwindl, 43, killed himself Sunday at his Manhattan apartment. Earlier in the week, George Froboese, leader of the Bund in the Midwest, took his life by beheading himself beneath the wheels of a train at Waterloo, Ind. He was enroute to New York from Milwaukee to answer the grand jury subpoena.

Correa identified Schwindl as a German-born defense worker who became a naturalized citizen in 1936. He said Schwindl, who came to this country in 1928, was a member of the Bund since 1939 and was fired from his job at the Brewster Aeronautical corporation, Long Island City, Queens, when the plant was taken over by the Navy.

Correa, however, refused to divulge the information he sought to garner from Schwindl.

INVASION?

THE British have lately warned the French living near the coast to leave their homes and move inland. This is a plain hint not merely of bombing, which has been going on in France for some time, but of invasion. Other signs point the same way, notably the vast increase in the American army, which can hardly be meant for the Pacific and is probably intended for use in France.

War plans are not ordinarily given out in advance. In this case the design is undoubtedly to harass the Germans. Many French may have wished to respond to the warning, thus hampering German defense plans, but the last report has it that they have been forbidden to move, in peril of their lives. The Germans want no clogging of roads by evacuees. They wish to hold a clear passage for more troops and munitions.

But the warning bothers the Germans just the same. They must keep defense forces and materials constantly on hand. They do not know when they will be needed. Whether or not the proposed invasion takes place, its mere threat alarms the Germans and aids the Russians. Aiding Russia now is one of the most important actions that any of the United Nations can take.

MEXICAN NAZIS

MEXICO has lost no time since entering the war. An order has been issued which will give the government control of about thirty German-owned coffee plantations. It has already begun taking over Axis businesses. Among those seized are Bayer and Merck, well-known drug firms, a bank, two retail drug stores, a hardware store and a dye company.

One Japanese coffee plantation has already been taken over, besides the German ones. There has been a belief that arms and other war materials were accumulated on these farms. Whether or not this is true, there were plenty of dangerous possibilities always present. A thorough clean-up of possible centers of espionage and other fifth-column activities is in progress.

Guatemala has been taking similar action. The Nazis believed entrance easy through these gates. But the gates are turning into heavy doors, locked and barred against Nazi or Jap invasion.

LOST cookery recipes are about the most tantalizing losses that can be thought of. The Writers' Guide to Oregon, for instance, speaks of a toothsome pioneer dish, fern pie, made of the stalks of young ferns. Only no one now knows how to make it.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour By Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to find another rain in progress. And a lot of folk, including Frank Palm, put in sprinkler systems for their gardens this Spring. Frank took me out to see his garden. Looks like a farm to me. Potatoes, tomatoes, corn, beans. Paid a compliment to his tomatoes and he declared he had paid $5,000 to learn how to grow them. Cheaper at the store for me, I am certain. Really should have invited him over to see my garden. He would have felt so much better about his.

Found a lot of war news at the plant, and all of it bad. Those Axis forces really are engaged in all-out effort. One satisfaction is that such effort invariably is short. Anyway, it is about time that the British started chasing the Germans and Italians down there in the desert. Also, it is about time that some one of the United Nations armies won a land battle.

I grow weary of reading that the enemy "advanced at terrific cost."

Nothing encouraging this day in all the war news unless it be that conference between Churchill and Roosevelt. Out of that may grow something. May or may not be a second front in Europe. Something has to be done to relieve pressure on the Russians or we will soon lose another important phase of the war.

All in good health and high in spirits, as happy as anyone's children.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

COOPERATION WITH LABOR

WASHINGTON — For years the U. S. Chamber of Commerce has been considered the citadel of big business and the big business and the nation's most vitriolic group of labor-baiters. For years its officers have hurled annual, semi-annual and sometimes monthly diatribes at Roosevelt's policies and at labor unions.

Therefore you can get some idea of their astonishment when the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Eric Johnston, called on Phil Murray head of the CIO, and Bill Green of the AFL.

Mr. Johnston, newly elected president of the U. S. Chamber, is its first president to come from west of Chicago. He is from Spokane, Wash. Also he is 44 and the Chamber's youngest president.

His talks with Green and Murray were as refreshing as his comparative youth.

"This may surprise you," he said, "but I think we businessmen have a lot in common with labor, and I'd like to propose that we get together on several things. I think I can show you that already we agree on quite a few things.

"My organization has done some things wrong in the past, but I think I can get most of my members to agree now on recognition of unions.

"That doesn't mean the closed shop, necessarily. But here's the first thing I think we can all agree on — cutting out name calling. We've called labor a lot of names and you've thrown a lot of brickbats at us. I think the atmosphere would be a lot better if both sides cut this out and gave the other the benefit of the doubt."

This sound suggestion struck an immediate responsive chord in both Green and Murray, who agreed that this was one point on which the CIO, the AFL and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce could concur, wide apart as they might be on other matters.

AGAINST COMMUNISM

"Another thing I think we can agree on," continued Johnston, "is to get to know each other better. A lot of men in my organization have thought you labor leaders wear horns. And I guess you thought the same thing of us. But I'm convinced that if we get acquainted we can work out a lot of things that seemed insurmountable before.

"And another thing on which I think we can agree is the principle of a fair profit—a fair profit for labor and for industry. You people can't collect dues from a sick industry, and you also have union profits of your own to protect. And along that line, I don't think that labor wants a communist system any more than industry."

"I've been in Russia and Germany," continued Johnston, "and under those systems labor gets a much shorter end of the deal than management. Management

Civilian Defense For Emergencies of War

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

FROM THE PACIFIC coast a friend of mine who was the most eminent authority on war gases in the last war writes me some simple rules for civilians in preparing for war emergencies in the civilian population. I feel that they are so much simpler than many of the elaborate and frightening rules that have been put out that I should like to pass them on.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The emphasis is on preparation and prevention. Proper preparation increases morale and self-confidence. Self-aid is also strongly emphasized and the fact that civilians should make the most of what is available.

To help reduce the fire hazard: Clear paper and rubbish from basements, attics, vacant lots and barns. Have water pails, sand and shovels in homes, garages, barns and in all buildings and working places.

Phosphorous Burns

Phosphorous burns with yellow flames. Smother with dirt or water. Skin burns from phosphorous are bad; treat them with five per cent copper sulphate solution.

Oil burns with a yellow, heavy, smoky flame. Smother it with sand. Breathe through wet cloths to protect nose, throat and lungs from smoke.

Thermite and magnesium burn with white, sizzling flames. Spray edges with water and smother with dry sand or dirt.

Burns should be protected, preferably with sterile oils; shock should be treated with ordinary means; plasma loss should be treated with blood plasma transfusions. Particles of foreign matter in burns should be removed.

War Gases

War gases may be mixed with incendiaries or demolition bombs. The best protection is obedience to air-raid rules; get inside with doors and windows closed. With ordinary wind conditions this will protect against dangerous concentrations. If windows are broken by bombs, breathe through wet cloth. Wash eyes, nose, mouth and throat with solution of a teaspoonful of baking soda in a glass of water.

War gases are not brutal or inhumane. They are less likely to produce death or permanent injury than bayonet, shot, shell or flames. It is not necessary to make a chemical identification of war gases in order to provide effective treatment. Tear gases are temporary in action and their effects may be handled by a two per cent baking soda solution.

Sneeze gases cause temporary discomfort with headache. They can be treated with a two per cent baking soda solution.

Lung irritants may bring no symptoms for 48 hours. If exposure is suspected, the best treatment is rest in bed.

Blister gases on the skin are very soluble in fats and are best treated with a three per cent solution of hydrogen peroxide or even simple washing with soap and water. Be careful where the blister fluid goes as it is also toxic.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. A. L.:—I would like some information about cataract of the eye. How long does it have to develop before it can be removed? Are both eyes apt to be afflicted at the same time? Is there any special care that can be given the bad eye that would be beneficial? Does diet help or hinder in any respect?

Answer: Oculists like to have a cataract ripen before they remove it but how long this ripening period should be is not easy to state. Furthermore, it is very dangerous to try to do this on your own advice because if cataracts are allowed to go on too long, the eye on that side will become blind. Double cataract is fairly common. No special treatment helps before operation. The only relation of diet to cataract is that cataract is common in diabetics.

Romance Thumbs a Ride

by ALLEN EPPES

SYNOPSIS

DIAN WESTON, attractive Ardendale girl, is jilted and her aunt, MISS MARTHA WESTON, tries to persuade her to marry JEROME CAIR, a local banker. Dian happens to meet BILL ROLLINS, a New York artist, who also has been jilted by another Ardendale girl. CLAIRE LESTER, the latter has discovered she loves PAUL PETERS, a local boy, who is now an engineer.

YESTERDAY: Dian and Bill hear Claire and Paul come up on the farmhouse porch for shelter.

CHAPTER EIGHT

INSIDE THE house Dian stared at Bill, and Bill stared right back at her.

"Claire!" said Bill.

"Paul Peters!" said Dian.

"Eloping!" they said in unison.

Suddenly Dian ran out into the hall. She flung open the front door.

"Come right in!" she called.

"You're just in time for some bridge!"

Claire and Paul jumped, and then stared. Then they walked inside.

"Fancy finding you here!" said Claire.

"After all, it's my house, you know," said Dian. She led them into the living room. "Claire, I think you know this gentleman," she said, nodding toward Bill.

"Oh!" said Claire, her eyes wide with astonishment.

"Fancy finding HIM here," said Dian, actually enjoying herself.

Paul Peters stepped forward. He took a good look at Bill, and then glared.

"Claire," he demanded, "who's this man?"

Before Claire could reply, Bill spoke up. "I'm the man she didn't elope with!" he said.

It took Claire some time to get hold of herself and handle what she felt was indeed an awkward situation.

"This is Mr. Rollins, Paul," she said. "I told you about him. Don't you—remember?"

"Yes, I remember," said Paul. "But you gave me the impression he had left for New York."

"I thought he was on his way," said Claire.

"And I was," said Bill. "But I got stopped by a shoe."

"A shoe?" said Claire. "What on earth do you mean?"

"It was my shoe," said Dian. "I threw it."

"You?" said Claire, eyeing Dian with a peculiar expression.

"Yes, Dian," said Bill. "Here it is—HER shoe." He took it from the pocket of his coat. "Cute—eh?" "Well!" said Claire explosively. "A damsel was in distress," Bill went on, "and we Rollinses never could resist going to a rescue."

"Adventure—and all that," said Dian. She smiled at Bill, grateful to him for carrying matters off in such a charming and amusing way.

"And I thought it only happened in books and plays."

"I must say," Claire remarked, "that you didn't lose much time after hearing about Fred Mayhew."

"Oh, that!" said Dian airily.

"Yes, that."

"Just one of those things, Claire—you know, here today and gone tomorrow, if you know what I mean."

"Well, I don't. All I know is that you and Fred Mayhew have been talking about marrying ever since I can remember."

"That's a lot of talk—that's all. Propinquity—my eye!"

"Anyway," Dian went on, "I was never one to let the grass grow under my feet. So when Bill drove past my house, and I saw how handsome he was, I simply couldn't resist stopping him."

"With THIS," said Bill, again holding up the shoe.

"For heaven's sake," Claire said, "put that thing away."

"Besides," said Dian, "Bill needed comfort. Didn't you, Bill?"

"I certainly did," said Bill. He shook his head sadly. "Don't forget that tragic scene you and I enacted upon your moonlit front porch."

"Bill—you poor darling!" said Claire.

"I came hurrying up your walk to claim my bride," Bill went on, "my footsteps light, my heart singing—and then . . . Well, just go back and think. You told me it was all off—after I'd driven nearly a thousand miles to make you Mrs. William James Rollins. You said your old sweetheart had returned, and that—"

"Bill, please, not here!" Claire begged.

"Why not?"

"There are others present."

"What of it? We're all friends—jilted and jiltors—under the same roof." Bill sighed heavily. "My weary footsteps going back down your walk—my heart like lead—all the singing wrong out of it. He made an expressive gesture. "So, can you blame me for welcoming some sort of diversion?"

"Meaning Dian Weston?" said Claire.

"Exactly," Bill turned to Dian. "I hope you don't mind." "Goodness, no," said Dian. "I'm glad I can be called a diversion. It's something different. I've been called lots of things, but never that."

Bill and Dian smiled at each other. It was almost as though they shared some wonderful secret.

"Dian was swell to me," Bill continued. "It was a sort of cast-off—misery loving company."

"Or when jilt meets jilt," said Dian.

Claire looked from one of them to the other.

"Are you two serious?" she demanded.

"If you ask me," Paul Peters broke in, "I think they're kidding the whole business."

"Paul Peters!" Dian exclaimed. "What an awful thing to say! One doesn't kid a broken heart."

"Darned if you look or act like a broken-hearted girl to me."

"It just goes to show," said Bill sadly.

"To show what?" said Claire.

"Oh, it's hard to explain," Bill replied. "Only, so few people understand what emotional upheavals the other people are going through. You agree with me, don't you, Dian?"

"I certainly do."

"You would," said Claire. "I'm dying for a cigar, if either of you men can spare one."

Paul and Bill each reached for his cigarette case.

"My pleasure," said Bill. "I beat you to it, Peters."

He lit Claire's cigarette for her.

"Thanks," she said. She drew deeply and blew a smoke ring ceilingward. "Well," she said, "here we are! Now what?"

"That's what I'd like to know," said Paul.

"Oh, Bill, I forgot!" Dian cried suddenly. "I was going to give you some food."

"You mean you're hungry?" Claire asked, shocked.

"Imagine!" said Bill. "I am!"

"Hungry—and calling each other by your first names—you and Dian. How perfectly ducky."

"Yes, isn't it?" said Dian. "But you'd hardly expect me to call Bill 'Mister Rollins' after I'd gone so far as to throw my shoe at him."

"I suppose not," said Claire. "And me sitting at home thinking Bill was utterly crushed."

"Are you disappointed to find that he isn't?" said Dian.

"Of course not. The idea."

Dr. Harrison Evans Talks At Kiwanis Ladies' Night

Psychiatry Topic Of Interesting Address

Dr. Harrison Evans, Columbus psychiatrist, was guest speaker Monday at the quarterly Ladies' Night meeting of the Kiwanis club at Hanley's tea room. About 60 Kiwanians and their wives enjoyed a delightful dinner at 6:30 p. m. and the unusually fine talk presented by Dr. Evans.

Using "Psychiatry" as the theme of his talk, Dr. Evans discussed the background of mental illnesses rather than the cure. He discussed psychiatry in connection with war times and told of development of mental illnesses through the worry and strain of the times. He told of different mental reactions that may be noted in psychiatry and urged calmness on his audience through these days of unrest.

He explained that "psychiatry" was the treatment or study of mental illness. At the close of his formal discussion, he answered many questions asked by interested members of the audience.

Hershel Hill, president of Kiwanis, was in charge of the affair. Tom Renick, chairman of the program committee, introduced the speaker.

PERSONALITY, BRAINS, BEAUTY MARK OVETA CULP HOBBY, WHO WILL LEAD NEW WOMEN'S ARMY

By MALVINA STEPHENSON
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23—Washington may be rife with war rumors, but for certain it's a gab and gossip mill.

In their close-up ringside seats, capitalites can pick up some spicy tid-bits about the national names and news. Often, it's one current personality which sweeps the tete-a-tetes, and right now the accent is on a little Texas lady.

Washington is simply all excited over the selection of Houston's Oveta Culp Hobby to direct the new Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, the first in this nation's history.

Of course, Mrs. Hobby has been around the capital since last Summer when she became chief of the women's interests section of the war department public relations division. Already, she had something of a national reputation as a newspaper executive and a lady lawyer.

But not until she emerged out in front of Uncle Sam's first soldierettes did she really steal the spotlight, and corner capital talk.

Stories Grow

What is Mrs. Hobby really like? What kind of a personality? Will she be successful? — and more often, "Have you heard this one?" (She's the type around whom stories grow and grow.)

Coming to Washington last August, Mrs. Hobby already had demonstrated her executive ability in various capacities but, apparently, at the outset, was as unfamiliar with Army terms and technicalities as the women her unit was to serve.

A newspaper reporter, lunching with Mrs. Hobby just after her arrival, suggested that she probably could get a lot of women's page stuff from the quartermaster corps, which is charged with feeding, housing and clothing soldiers. Mrs. Hobby looked puzzled and asked, "What's that?" (referring to the famous QMC.)

But the elementary beginning does not mean that Mrs. Hobby has not made good at her post, at least, as far as the war department is concerned. She rolled up her sleeves, plunged in full force, and won the respect of the officers with whom she dealt. Anyway, hers was not the job of a technical expert from the average woman's viewpoint.

Friends In High Places

Mrs. Hobby is not a nosey femme but gets along with people in her calm and easy way. A good looker and a clever talker, Oveta Hobby always has been a stand-out in social circles, although she has avoided the capital party front. Her closest friends may be counted among the other Texas leaders in the capital, including Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones.

Recently, Mrs. Hobby was in a dinner party at a fashionable hotel with Speaker Rayburn and the latter's friend, Peggy Palmer, widow of the attorney general under President Wilson.

As the group entered the modernistic blue room, the orchestra struck up the lively notes of "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

In her confident manner, Mrs. Hobby turned to Rayburn, "Mr. Speaker, they must have seen 'us' coming."

But no sooner were they seated than the melody had ended, and two little Texas schoolgirls marched up to the orchestra leader to thank him for playing their request number. (And some of the ladies in the Hobby party exchanged knowing winks.)

Powerful Personality

Which all goes to show that Mrs. Hobby, herself, is not exactly a feminine favorite, may even be more popular with the men folk. But definitely she is a strong personality and most people have very decided opinions about her. If they like her, it's "very, very much."

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Massachusetts congresswoman and original sponsor of the WAAC bill, is impressed with Mrs. Hobby and thinks she will make good as director. In the first place, she appreciates Mrs. Hobby's continued support and interest in the WAAC, and likewise, she thinks that Mrs. Hobby will "look the part" of a clever leader, a quality that can't be underestimated in getting the corps off to a good start.

Here's the way Mrs. Rogers sees it. Attending a movie, Mrs. Rogers got a squint at a feminine volunteer wearing a uniform. The model was oversized and bulged in the wrong places. Well, the crowd tittered, then roared, and Mrs. Rogers winced.

"What if such a thing should happen to my corps?" she shuddered.

The director must be both attractive and able, she was even more convinced. The old story of "beauty and brains," but it's still a rare combination, although Mrs. Hobby has a good share of both.

Parliamentarian

In fact, Mrs. Hobby looks like the social type, a Blue-Book junior Leaguer, but she has spent much time poring over legal tomes and arming herself with an amazing mass of knowledge.

At 19, she served her first term as parliamentarian for the Texas state legislature, and at 21 was an attaché to the Democratic national convention. At 24, she was president of the Texas League of Women Voters.

Upon her graduation from Mary Hardin-Baylor college, she took a fling at co-ed life at the University of Texas. Her specialization in parliamentary law led to the service with the legislature. She authored a textbook entitled "Mr. Chairman" and her by-line syndicated column delves into the intricacies of the subject.

At 26, she married William P. Hobby, publisher of the Houston Post and former governor of Texas. This actually put her in the newspaper business and her flair for administration has brought streamlined reorganization in virtually all departments of the paper. She literally earned her title of vice president, but still found time to do plenty of actual writing, including book reviews.

Now 37, but still girlish looking, Mrs. Hobby is fond of home life and has two children—"bambinos" as she calls them, William, Jr., 10, and Jessica, 5. They like to play soldier, and are equally excited about their mother getting into uniform and leading the women's army with rank equal to that of army major.

Daytime Dinner Dates
Coin dotted black faille makes the high-waisted skirt of this dinner suit. A jacket with fringed revers completes the costume.
Net with a large coin dot detail is shirred in broad bands for the low-cut bodice of this dinner suit. Back is covered.
DAYLIGHT dining, a seasonal fashion circumstance which used to throw us women, now seems more reasonable in the face of wartime. Your soldier or sailor beau isn't equipped with time or money to trail a lady who trails her skirts of an evening. Something pretty to please his few hours off duty, something that can ride the bus or subway, or walk the street in broad daylight, is the answer.
A good formula for testing such a dress when selecting it would include a street length skirt; a bodice that will look decorative across a table; and if possible an ensemble jacket to hide the decor until one reaches the table.

Youths Not Subject For Call To Colors Until Becoming 20

Registration of Pickaway county men of 18 and 19 years of age will be started at noon Saturday in Pickaway county common pleas courtroom with volunteer workers assisting the draft board in its task.

Two days will be devoted to the sign up, which completes all registration under the draft act which now calls for all between ages of 18 and 65 to be registered. However, no one is subject to military duty until he reaches 20.

Draft officials are not making any estimate of the number of youths expected to appear before the registrars although Major Ray Allison, chief classification officer of state Selective Service headquarters, believes that 170,000 will be registered throughout the state.

Estimates from national draft headquarters state that 232,500 Ohio youths will be signed up, this figure being 60,000 more than Allison's total. He explained that his estimate is based on vital statistics files whereas that of national headquarters is based on one-half of the 465,000 who registered in the February 16 sign up.

Starts At 12 Noon
The courtroom will be open at 12 o'clock noon Saturday will remain open until 6 p. m.

All who are not able to register Saturday will be given opportunity on Tuesday when the courtroom will be open from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m.

All boys born after January 1, 1922, and before June 30, 1924, must register. Although they are not subject to military service until they reach 20 they must carry their registration cards with them at all times.

Green and Murray also concurred heartily on this point. Result of the conversation was an agreement to get together from time to time to discuss common problems. Johnston said quite frankly he could not speak for the entire membership of the U. S. Chamber, and would have to do some missionary work to sell them on all of his labor ideas. However, he said he was convinced that the Chamber had learned a lot of lessons during the war, and was definitely in the mood to cooperate.

GEN. MACARTHUR
Popular young Senator Josh Lee will never forget his first encounter with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in which the Army hero proved himself, then as now, a man of dynamic action. It happened in 1935 while MacArthur was Chief of Staff and Lee was a rookie Representative from Oklahoma.

Lee walked into the House one day while Congressman Vito Marcantonio, New York left-winger, was assailing the ROTC in colleges. Lee didn't like it. He was fresh from the campus of the University of Oklahoma, which has one of the finest ROTC units in the country.

So Lee let go with a counterblast which almost blew Marcantonio off his feet. One of the most interested readers of the Congressional Record next day was General MacArthur. Several days later Lee telephoned MacArthur about a problem. The telephone conversation went like this:

Lee: "Hello, General MacArthur, this is Congressman Josh Lee of Oklahoma. I'd like to ask a favor of you."

MacArthur: "Mr. Congressman, it will be a pleasure to do you a favor. If it is within our power, you'll have it. You are a real friend of the U. S. Army."

Lee: "Thanks, General. This is what I have on my mind. I'd like to have Biff Jones transferred from the University of Louisiana to the University of Oklahoma to coach football. He's an Army man, and you can do it."

MacArthur: "Yes, sir, I can and it will be done."

Lee: "Thank you, General."

MacArthur: "It's a pleasure, Mr. Congressman."

And it was done immediately. "That," grins Lee reminiscently, "is the way General MacArthur works."

JONES' RUBBER BRAINTRUST
Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa wasn't shooting in the dark when he charged that the government's synthetic rubber program is controlled by "inimical private interests," anxious to avert competition after the war.

His statement followed a closed-door meeting of an investigating committee, headed by the Iowa Senator, at which it was revealed that the mysterious "advisory committee" which assists Jesse Jones in directing synthetic rubber production is composed chiefly of officials of the big rubber companies and Standard Oil.

For weeks Gillette tried to find out who was on this committee, but was unable to get any definite information. The only name Gillette could definitely establish was that of E. R. Weidlein, $1-a-year man on leave from the Mellon Institute.

But Gillette now has the full list of this secret braintrust. It was revealed at the closed-door meeting by Paul E. Hadlick, the committee's able counsel. How Hadlick got the list is his secret, but committee members gasped when he read these names:

R. P. Dinmore of Goodyear Tire and Rubber; P. K. Frolich of the Standard Oil Development Company; J. N. Street of Firestone Rubber; W. A. Gibbons of

DEFENSE FUNDS BEING MAILED FOR CIVIC USE

Budget Commission's Advice Followed By Commissioners In Distributing $3,000

CIRCLEVILLE GETS $798

Money To Be Used To Buy Necessary Equipment To Promote Training

Residents of the three larger corporations in Pickaway county will soon see civilian defense council work speeded after receipt Tuesday of state funds.

Circleville, Ashville and Williamsport received their share of the money Tuesday with other villages and townships to be awarded a portion of the defense fund of $3,000 as soon as they set up Civilian Defense Councils.

Circleville received $798.20 of the total; Ashville, $110.10, and Williamsport, $60.50.

The money is distributed to the townships and towns throughout the county on a basis of population ration as recommended by the budget commission of the county. These three cities are the only ones now having the councils with others to receive financial support as soon as they establish their boards.

Money given to the various communities is to be used exclusively for the defense program in educating the public, providing for an adequate Civilian Defense and purchase of equipment necessary to demonstrate various duties and provide for the air defense of the communities.

Circleville's board has been handicapped for several weeks while awaiting funds and can now proceed with plans for installation of an air raid warning system, training of air raid wardens, purchase of demonstration bombs and finance of education films for the public.
